

I understand the right to do business, but I also have the right to quiet time from my phone. In today's age and technology there are other ways to sell a product. Example computer, mail, e-mail. If I need something from some company I will call them. I recently had a particular problem with a telemarketer on my business line. The problem was they called 10 times to try and sell me something. Once I say "no" it means "NO". I feel we as a consumer have the right to our "Do Not Call" lists.
